The Gate of the Year

*"And I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year:
'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown.' And he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the Hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than a known way.'"*

So heart be still:
What need our little life,
Our human life, to know
If God hath comprehension?
In all the dizzy strife
Of things both high and low,
God hideth His intention.

God knows. His will
Is best. The stretch of years
Which wind ahead, so dim
To our imperfect vision,
Are clear to God. Our fears
Are premature: In Him
All time hath full provision.

Home is where the heart is

Living in PCC's residence halls

Most students admit to having some concerns about roommates and residence hall life before arriving at college for the first time. The transition from living at home to living in a residence hall can seem overwhelming, even for those who have older siblings who have been to college before. Almost everyone has vivid memories of arriving, meeting new roommates, getting settled, and learning to adjust to different schedules, personalities, and expectations.

PCC students understand those concerns. "Before I arrived at PCC, I was very nervous about sharing a room with three other girls," recalls Christi Main (N.C.). "I prayed for good roommates the whole summer before my freshman year. It's been a great experience. I underestimated the blessings I would receive from nightly prayer group, getting close to roommates, and simply making new friends."

Chris Littrell

"God has been extremely good to me by providing me with godly roommates who are some of my closest friends," shares Chris Littrell (Tex.). Eunice Thiessen (Canada) agrees: "It's great to live with others that share a common relationship with Jesus Christ. A special bond develops between roommates, and that truly makes it a home away from home." Elizabeth Turner (Kans.) is convinced that roommates' different personalities and characteristics bring a unique atmosphere to the room. "By getting to know roommates, suitemates, prayer group members, and others on your hall, you'll make friends that you might never meet otherwise," she says.

In addition to meeting new friends, many people find that residence hall life affects them in ways they might not have anticipated. "Look at residence hall life as an opportunity to appreciate the finer things in life, like clip-on bed lamps and shower caddies," grins Christi Main. "I've learned to be quieter in the morning, faster in the shower, and neater with my clothes." Eunice Thiessen notes, "You learn to respect other people and the way they do things." Andrew Doan (Colo.) has learned the importance of being flexible with space, things, and people. "Otherwise, you'll get bent out of shape," he points out. "Communication is the key to a Christ-centered, happy room," observes Chris Conklin (Oreg.).

Memories of residence hall life bring opportunities to reflect on how "all things work together for good to them that love God." Rom. 8:28 "I wish I would have known how quickly the time would pass," reflects senior Chris Littrell. "I would have done a better job making the most of it and adding to great memories."

Living and studying together builds friendships with roommates.

PCC Ensembles

Ministering in word and song

Music Ensembles Travel in Southeast United States

Washing windows is one way ensemble members serve pastors and churches.

PCC's traveling music ensembles do a great deal more than just travel and sing in schools and churches. Their ministry extends well beyond songs, testimonies, and skits. Each group's primary goal is not to entertain or to be entertained, but to serve God's people. Ensemble members find that as they minister to other people, ministry takes place in their own lives. Matt Porter (Mich.) remembers a PCC ensemble coming to his church when he was in sixth grade, an event that influenced his choice to attend PCC. "I've learned to be flexible and adapt to last-minute changes," he points out. "Our schedule is fast-paced and it never stops. It's hard to find time for daily devotions, but it's essential. I've found you can't be an effective servant unless you're spiritually prepared." Heather Bulla (Colo.) echoes Matt's sentiments. "My heart has to be clean in order for God to touch others through me," she shares.

PCC's first ensemble traveled during January 1976. Now, eight different ensembles travel to schools and churches across the country and in Canada for twelve weeks each summer and two weeks in January. The groups travel thousands of miles and visit hundreds of churches and schools. In addition, ensembles produce musical recordings in PCC's recording studios.

Any student can try out for ensemble, regardless of their academic major. Ensemble directors look for musical ability, a cheerful smile, and a servant's heart. Holly Falls (Ala.) claims the verse, "The Lord is my strength and song." Ex. 15:2.

"Our prayer was always that people would see the Lord in us," she recalls. "The Lord blessed during every service."

Artistic ability is a gift from God, and the goal of PCC's art program is to prepare students to use their artistic abilities for God's glory. In a field known for its emphasis on self-expression and personal style, PCC students are encouraged to master technical skills first. Jim Hutchinson, chairman of the art department, says, "Some people feel that training in fundamentals inhibits self-expression. We believe that mastering the fundamentals allows our students to more freely express themselves."

Learning about God's standard of excellence, art students work in a variety of artistic mediums to build a solid foundation of technical skills. "A successful artist combines God-given talent with a Biblical work ethic and constant practice," notes Mr. Hutchinson. Individual instruction and critiques, art displays in the Communicative Arts Center gallery, and two internships allow art students to build a professional portfolio and gain practical job experience.

In addition to undergraduate degrees in commercial art and graphic design, PCC also offers a Master of Arts degree in commercial art and a Master of Fine Arts degree in art. These programs offer opportunities for students to

Brian with renowned portrait painter Joe Bowler

BRIAN NEHER—PCC '94 grad AWARD-WINNING ARTIST

"Art is unique because it leaves a record on the canvas, telling more about the artist than he or she realizes," says professional portrait artist and PCC graduate Brian Neher ('94). "If you aren't interested in what you do, it will show in your work." Brian's work reflects his lifelong interest in art and his commitment to make each piece his best. In 1996, he earned an honorable mention in Manhattan's National Portrait Competition, one of 13 awards given among 3,500 entries. His award-winning entry was featured in the December '96 issue of American Artist magazine.

From an early age, Brian took advantage of every opportunity to develop his artistic talent. "My grandmother had a tremendous influence on me," he recalls. "She was a commercial artist who encouraged me to draw and allowed me to use some of her materials as motivation. I enjoyed watching her work at the easel and would often try to copy some of her drawings. She occasionally took me with her when delivering a job to a client. She gave me a glimpse into some aspects of a career in art."

Brian chose to attend PCC after visiting the campus during high school. "I was immediately drawn to the outstanding art facilities and to the type of artwork displayed during the faculty art show," he states. "It was encouraging to see that PCC teaches solid, fundamental art principles." Art faculty member Brian Jekel, an award-winning illustrator and member of the Society of Illustrators, introduced Brian Neher to renowned portrait painter Joe Bowler, and Brian credits much of his progress as an artist to his ongoing friendship and working relationship with both men. "Mr. Jekel continues to be as encouraging to me today as he was when I was a student," Brian comments. "I feel very privileged to have been his student, and I hope to someday be able to give to others what Brian Jekel and Joe Bowler have given to me."

Brian and his wife Jacquie (Clark, '95) currently live in Charlotte, N.C.

An Evening to Remember

PCC's first Alumni Banquets

PCC alumni, friends, and prospective students met in Lansing, Mich.; Chicago, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind.; and Columbus, Ohio. They enjoyed the unique opportunity to welcome PCC to their home areas. Dr. and Mrs. Arlin Horton hosted "An Evening to Remember," featuring an elegant dinner, heart-stirring music, a video tour of PCC's campus, and a unique question-and-answer session about the college's past, present, and future. The evenings offered insights and reflections on the many ways God has blessed PCC through the years. The four banquets had a total attendance of over 600.

Ladies Celebration

Fall 1999

Over 200 ladies from across the country gathered at Camp o' the Pines for PCC's first Ladies Celebration October 14-16. Encouraging, practical messages, uplifting music, and special times of fellowship, including singing around the campfire, provided opportunities for spiritual refreshment and renewal.

"The practical, daily life applications from the Word of God were the best."
—Florida

The beautiful facilities at Camp o' the Pines provided a tranquil, relaxing setting.

"A wonderful, refreshing time in the Lord!"
—Texas

"As a mother of three and expecting a fourth, I really appreciated the practical session straight from the Word of God. Each session ministered to me and pointed out something needed in my life."
—Alabama

Uplifting messages encouraged many hearts.

Plan now to attend next year's conference, October 19-21, 2000.

“I came to Las Cruces last year to attend the university, and I discovered Rejoice Radio while driving in the car. It has been such a blessing to hear the music that is uplifting to my spirit. Please keep the same quality of songs that are not only beautiful but truly give glory to Jesus Christ.” —New Mexico

“I praise the Lord for a Christian radio station in my area that I can actually enjoy listening to. The music is much more to my taste. I believe that Christian music should be different from the world's music and that is what Rejoice Radio provides. Fine quality music that is uplifting and glorifying to the Lord is difficult to find on most so-called Christian stations. Thanks!” —Indiana

“We recently found your wonderful program. What a blessing it has been to us. We thank the Lord for you. Enclosed is a check to help cover the expenses for this great ministry in music and the spoken Word. We look forward to hearing your programming daily and being on your mailing list.” —Kansas
